

My Dearest one,

I could not hold back the love I have for you and here I'm trying to fit all the overwhelming love through a thank you note. It actually crossed my mind that how Am I even handling the family, kids and my career all together at once. Instant answer any woman tells herself is that they are super women and they can move mountains with their finger tips. Sure there are super women, but I'm a very normal woman with goals, ambitions and immense love towards my family. And you are the strongest support I ever had and helped me in each and every step for building my dreams and bringing them to the reality. You are still holding my hand and helping me to keep my hard-earned dreams safe.

Thank you for understanding me every moment. My tantrums, my terrible cooking and my demanding nature. You have always treated me as your best friend, made me blush like a teenage girl friend and fulfilled my life by taking me as your wife.

Thank you for working so hard for our family, for our kids and for the bright future ahead of us. I know it would be terrible sometimes to go out there and give your best. But still u never gave up. And you never gave up on us too. I'm so gratified with what you are doing for us.

P.S thank you for being so irresistible and handsome. Sometimes you distract me so much while I'm working or in a meeting and that make me run into your arms to feel that warm hug.

I can keep on going to tell you how lucky I'm to get you as my soul-mate, love of my life and as my bestest friend.

Thank you dear husband.

Your lady.
